

Topic: Television and Radio Standard

April 10, 2013

Attention to The Federal Communications Commission (FCC),

I oppose any changes to the current FCC indecency standards that would allow television and radio stations to broadcast expletives and nudity on the public airwaves, even if brief or "fleeting."

The Supreme Court has confirmed the FCC's authority to enforce policies regarding expletives and nudity, especially during times when children are likely to be watching or listening.

Relaxing the current policy would not serve the public interest and I urge the FCC to reject all proposals that would allow for the broadcast of expletives and nudity on FCC-licensed stations.

I would like to keep standards that one would find in most schools and businesses. There is a standard of professionalism for conduct. Homes where children reside are thought to be a place of safety. It is a place to establish a healthy environment for development into healthy contributing citizens. The standards that FCC currently enforces help contribute to that environment.

Sincerely.

Nancy Madrigal